OBREGON TO ARBITRATE PROPOSALS

CONFEREES TO MEET IN JUAREZ OR AT EL PASO.

MAY CONFER SUNDAY

CARRANZA'S MONEY IS WORTH TWENTY PER CENT.

EL PASO, Texas, April 29.—General Alvaro Obregon, minister of war of the de facto government, with the chief military commanders of northern Mexico, made a return call of courtesy today on Major Generals Scott and Funston, preliminary to the first conference between the American and Mexican military officials regarding the pursuit of Villa and his bandits.

In either the customs house in Juarez, Mexico, or at some agreed place in El Paso, the conferees will submit their proposals. General Obregon, who is vested with plenary powers, from First Chief Carranza, sounded a hopeful note with the expression that "we should reach a satisfactory termination of these negotiations that will meet with the approval of our people."

Minister of War Obregon, with Generals Trevino, Gutierrez, Calles, Gervira and Santos, will submit the proposition that the de facto government is ready to take over the pursuit of the Villa bandits, and protect the border and, therefore, the United States will be relieved of the burden of the American border states.

Generals Scott and Funston will counter, it is understood, with the proposition that American troops be disposed in certain spheres of northern Chihuahua to remain until the Carranza government has shown that there is no longer a Villa bandit menace to the American border states.

Major General Scott said that not until he had conferred with General Obregon would it be definitely known whether the first conference will be held in Juarez or El Paso.

The general added that the conference might not be held today, but Sunday or Monday.

MEXICO CITY, April 28.—A decree issued by General Carranza announces that Mexico's new issue of paper money will be worth twenty cents in Mexican gold for each paper dollar. This will make the new peso equivalent to ten cents in American gold. The present paper peso has a value of a little less than three cents in American gold.

The new money will be issued May 1 next, but only in payment of government salaries. The old issue will be received in payment of taxes and other governmental obligations and, in accordance with the decree, will be retired immediately.

The new issue totals 500,000,000 pesos and is uncounterfeitable having been printed by a large American bank-note firm. Telegrams were sent tonight to the governor of every state in the republic instructing them fully as to the issuance of the new money, sums of which sufficient to cover the payrolls of government employees had been sent to them.

QUICK ACTION EXPECTED.

U. S. Troops Patrol Streets Where Conference Is Being Held.

EL PASO, Texas, April 29.—Two facts entering into the conference which is to begin today between General Alvaro Obregon, representing Mexico, and Generals Hugh L. Scott and Frederick Funston, representing the United States, encouraged the belief that the negotiations might not be dragged out for any great length of time.

One was that General Obregon came to the border with full power to act in behalf of his government in any arrangement that may be made for the disposition of Brigadier General Pershing's expeditionary forces.

The other was that the Mexican minister of war had summoned to the conference the military governors of the three Mexican states touching American territory.

With General Obregon in possession of full plenary powers, time will not be consumed in telegraphic communications between Juarez and Mexico City. The attendance at the conference of military Governors P. Elias Calles of Sonora, Ignacio Enriquez of Chihuahua and Jacinto Trevino, of Coahuila means that all matters affecting a possible patrol of northern Mexico by American

TELEGRAPH TIPS

BERLIN.—The attention of all Germany is directed tonight toward the audience of the American ambassador with the German emperor at general army headquarters. The German people are watching with eager interest for word indicating whether a settlement has been reached in the submarine controversy. Berlin passed the day in quite waiting with no developments in the case. The house had another strong day encouraged by Wall street advances and optimistic views held here.

COLUMBUS.—Burglars invaded the state house last night and used a jimmy vainly on the doors of the liquor licensing board's offices. Secretary J. L. Hampton of the board this morning found the door lock badly damaged but still holding. He said only a small amount of money was in the office and a thief could not have gotten away with much property of intrinsic value.

WASHINGTON.—An appeal was filed today in the supreme court from the decision of the Ohio supreme court which held that the Sprague congressional redistricting law, enacted by the legislature in 1915 had been invalidated by an adverse referendum vote by the people.

HE BEATS RECORD; GOES UP 24,408 FEET

LONDON, April 29.—Harry G. Hawker made a world's altitude record in an aeroplane at Brooklands Wednesday, according to an announcement made by the aero club here. Hawker ascended to a height of 24,408 feet.

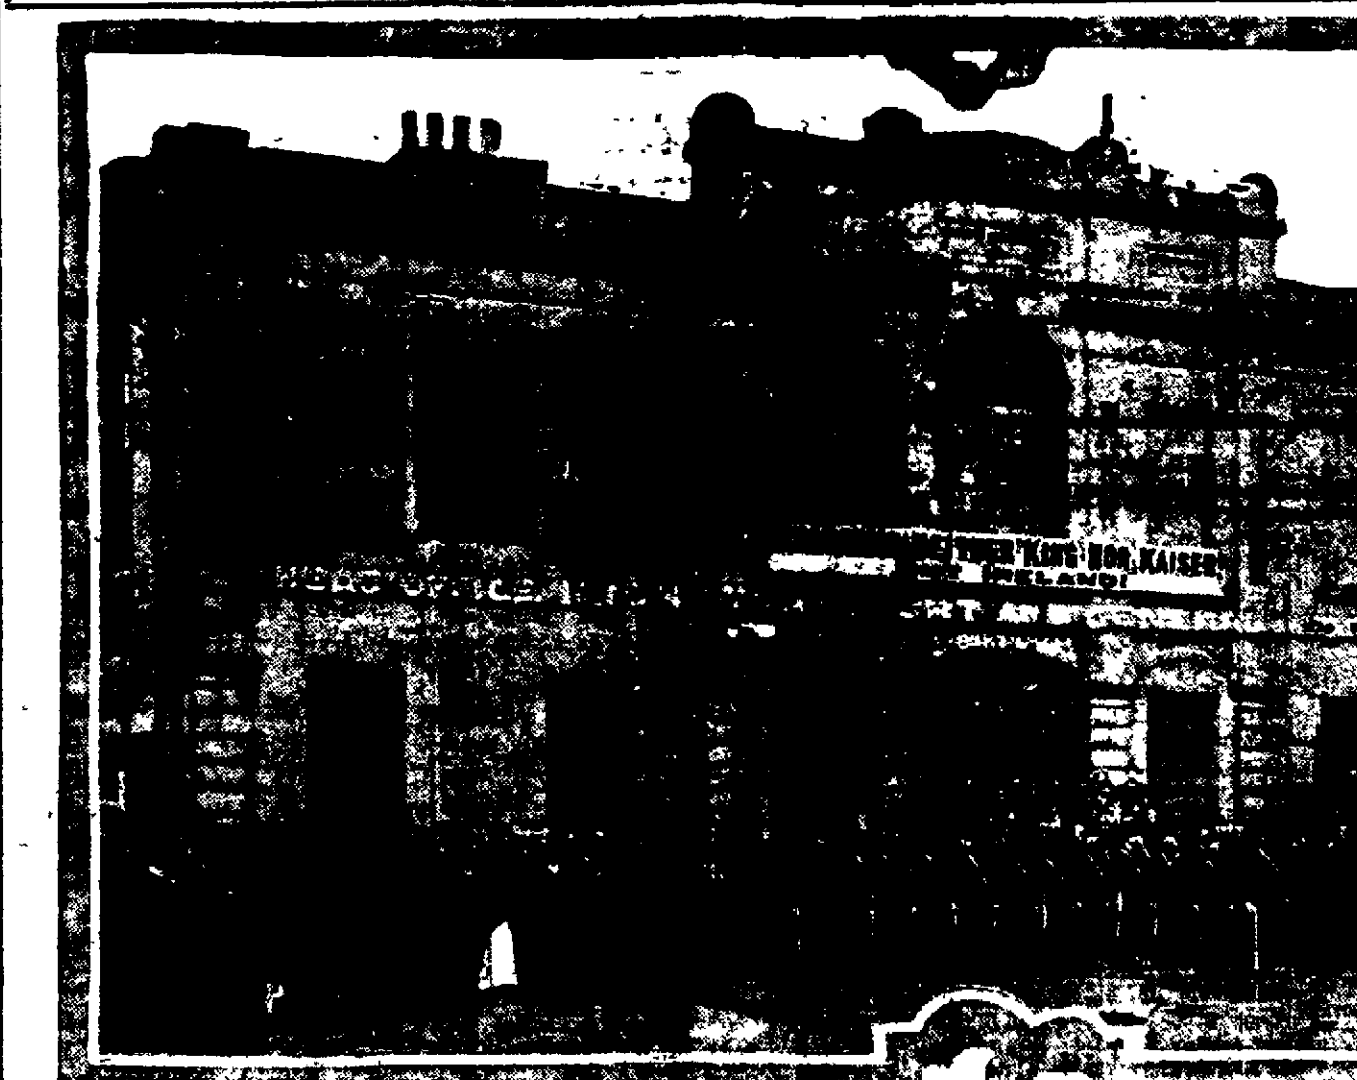

MACCABEE RIFLES FORMED.

TOLEDO, April 29.—Toledo Company No. 1, Maccabee Rifles, of Toledo, has been organized with a membership of 50. Headquarters of the Ohio regiment are here. This year's annual encampment of the organization will be in July at Camp Perry, where the company will have access to the government ranges. Every member becomes identified with the National Rifle Association of America.

NEW RESERVE METHOD

WASHINGTON, April 29.—The federal reserve board announced today that it would put into effect June 15 its new plan for country-wide check clearing and collection. Under the plan the actual cost of clearing and collection of checks will be assessed against member banks in proportion to their use of the system.

Liberty Hall Headquarters of the Irish Rebels

This photograph of Liberty Hall, headquarters of the followers of Jim Larkin, the agitator, who was in the United States not long ago. From this point the rebels spread through Dublin. At the right is a company of "Larkin's Citizenry Soldiers." They are probably the men concerned in the capture of the postoffice acting under direction of the Sinn Fein society. The hall was taken by British soldiers, Wednesday, April 26, at the cost of eleven lives.

STRIKES BREAK OUT AT THREE IMPORTANT INDUSTRIAL CENTERS

Youngstown, Cincinnati and Pittsburgh Affected by Labor Trouble.

Machinists in Ohio and Kentucky Prepare to Go Out Today.

YOUNGSTOWN, O., April 29.—The 1300 employees of the Republic Rubber company who are affected by the closing of the plant here are being paid off today. No trouble had developed this forenoon. Announcement was made yesterday that the entire plant would be closed indefinitely because of demands of increased pay that could not be met.

At a meeting last night of representatives of engineers, electricians, pipe fitters, machinists, boiler-makers' unions, a metal trades department of the Youngstown district labor unions was formed. This will give iron and steel workers a new organization binding 30,000 men here more closely together.

A big mass meeting of labor men here is scheduled for Sunday when the question of calling a general strike in the Mahoning Valley steel mills May 1 is to be discussed, it is said. The action is being considered as a plan to support the demands of machinists in some of the plants here for shorter hours and increased pay. These demands will be refused, the Employers' association advises.

PITTSBURGH, Pa., April 29.—The villages of the Turtle Creek Valley where approximately 30,000 workmen are on strike to enforce their demand for an eight hour day were uniformly quiet when the pickets took their places at shop entrances today. Strikers generally remained off the streets, but railroad detectives and deputy sheriffs patrolled their beats.

An effort to settle the strike was to be made at noon when employees of the state bureau of mediation and conciliation with representatives of the federal department of labor were expected to confer with factory managers and owners.

CINCINNATI, O., April 29.—Between 3,000 and 4,000 machinists in Cincinnati, Newport, Covington and Ludlow were prepared to join the machinists' strike at noon today if notices agreeing to grant demands for unionizing shops and establishing a uniform 48-hour working week were not posted by the employers according to John Doyle, business agent of the union. As a forerunner to the strike at least two shops recorded strikes early Saturday morning and about 50 men left their benches.

A mass meeting of machinists will be held tomorrow at 2 p. m., when further arrangements will be made for the strike. In most of the shops according to Mr. Doyle the men will work until noon today. If the post-noon agreements fail to appear by that time he said the men would not return Monday.

PLOT TO SLAY THREE IS EXPOSED BY WOMAN

ST. JOSEPH, Mich., April 29.—Displaying five razor blades on her left arm, and weak from fright, Julia Irvin, a negro woman of Hartford, arrived here today and uncovered to the police a plot which, she says, was aimed at her life and those of two others. Van Buren county officials are seeking the arrest of Frank Lee, also a negro, of Hartford.

The woman, said Lee had become insanely jealous of her and that he came into her room, threatened and slashed a razor, springing at her. After a fierce struggle, Lee departed.

ECONOMIC BATTLE AFTER EUROPE'S WAR

NEW YORK, April 29.—The National Metal Trades Association, at the closing session today of its eighteenth annual convention, was warned by James A. Emery, general counsel to the National Association of Manufacturers, to prepare for a great industrial war when the conflict of arms in Europe is over.

"This nation," he said, "faces war, not a sanguinary contest, but an economic contest between the industrial and commercial forces of the old world and the new."

Against high wage cost, short hours and less efficiency in America, Europe would pit low wage costs, long hours and high efficiency, he said.

WILLIS IS PERTURBED OVER LABOR TROUBLE

Ohio's Great and Good Governor is Taking Notes on Situation.

COLUMBUS, O., April 29.—Governor Willis today devoted himself to inquiries concerning labor disputes over Ohio. After receiving reports of strikes and threatened strikes from a score of cities in all parts of the state, the governor expressed great interest and surprise in the activities of organized labor. Many unions have just cause for demanding higher pay and better working conditions, he said, owing to general conditions of prosperity in which they should share.

"I am unwilling, of course," he added, "to think that all demands of labor should be met by employers. Each case must be considered separately. As a result of the European war business has been unduly stimulated almost to the point of becoming feverish. It is but natural that there should be efforts on the part of workmen to share in this temporary prosperity."

In order to keep in touch with the labor situation, Governor Willis took notes on the agitation in Cleveland, Youngstown, Columbus, Springfield, Cincinnati, Tiffin and a number of smaller cities. He was told machinists, street car men and molders appear particularly active in formulating demands for higher wages.

REDMOND BEWAILS 'INSANE' UPRISING OF COUNTRYMEN

Blames Men Who Stay in Safe Remoteness of American Office.

Scores Policy of Oppression and Cruelty Followed by the Germans.

LONDON, April 29.—John Redmond, leader of the Irish nationalists in the house of commons last night gave the Associated Press a statement concerning the uprising in Dublin. In part, it is as follows:

"My first feeling, of course, on hearing of this insane movement, was one of horror, discouragement and almost despair. I asked myself whether Ireland, as so often before in her tragic history, was to dash the cup of liberty from her lips. Was the insanity of a small section of her people once again to turn all her marvelous victories of the last few years into irreparable defeat and to send her back on the very eve of her final recognition as a free nation, into another long night of slavery, into another long night of weary and uncertain struggling."

"The misguided, insane young men who have taken part in this movement in Ireland, have risked, and some of them, lost their lives. But what am I to say of those men who have sent them into this issue and anti-patriotic movement while they have remained in the safe remoteness of American cities."

"I might add that this movement has been set in motion by this same class of men at the very moment when America is demanding reparation for the blood of innocent American men, women and children, shed by Germany."

"For look at the Irish position today. In the short space of forty years, Ireland has by a constitutional movement, made an almost unbroken triumph march from pauperism and slavery to prosperity and freedom. She has won back the possession of Irish land; she has begun emigration, she has at last begun an era of national prosperity. Finally she has succeeded in placing on the statute books the greatest charter of freedom ever offered her since the days of Grattan. Is all this to be lost?"

"When war came, she made a choice, which was inevitable, if she was to be true to all the principles which she held through all her history and which she had just so completely vindicated on her own soil, namely, the rights of small nations, sacred principles of nationality, liberty and democracy."

"Moreover, the nations for which through all her history she had felt the sympathy that came from common principles and common aspirations, were trampled, as she in her time had been trampled under the iron heel of arrogant forces."

"What has Ireland suffered in the past which Poland, Alsace, Belgium, and Serbia have not suffered at the hands of Germany? And may I add also that portion of the soil of

ALASKA UNION TURNS DOWN WAGE SCALE

SEWARD, Alaska, April 29.—The Anchorage Labor union rejected the wage scale offered by the federal arbitration board, endeavoring to settle the strike among workmen on the government's railroad in Alaska. The strike began February 12.

According to railroad officials, the American workmen at Anchorage were satisfied with the scale, but the foreign element, comprising a majority of the common laborers, dominated the meetings of the union held yesterday.

Work continued today at Seward without a sign of trouble.

Lieutenant Meers of the commission said he had not asked for troops and none were on the way.

GERMANY'S REPLY, IF TO BE READY MONDAY

LONDON, April 29.—The Berliner Tageblatt says that Germany's reply to the latest American note has been completed and will be delivered at the beginning of next week, according to a dispatch from Copenhagen to the Exchange Telegraph company.

BLIND RUSSIAN'S FIDDLE WINS DAY

Immigration Commissioner Admits Alien After Hearing Music.

SAN FRANCISCO, Calif., April 29.—Abraham Haltovich, a blind Russian musician, and his 19-year-old brother, who had been held at the immigration station here for deportation as aliens likely to become public charges, were free today, with the right of entry into this country, because Edward White, commissioner of immigration, happened to hear the musician playing his violin.

Through the open window of the commissioner's office there floated the strains of Tschalkowsky's "Rondeau," played by a master hand. Impressed with the quality of the music, White ordered the Russian musician and his violin brought before him. His violin brought before him. His violin brought before him.

Once more Haltovich played the Russian song of love, and, under its spell, White ordered the board of inquiry to convene and consider again Haltovich's case.

The board learned that the immigrant was a graduate of the Imperial Russian Conservatory of Music located at Petrograd and that by a special decree of the emperor, the disability that as a Jew would have barred him from the institution had been lifted. They learned that he was a high school graduate in Russia as a result of his musical talent. He had forsaken his native land in order to get his young brother out of the country to save him from the trenches.

The brothers were taken in charge by the Hebrew Immigrant Aid society.

IT'S TOO BAD, GIRLS!

COLUMBUS, O., April 29.—Disregarding an opinion of the Franklin county prosecuting attorney, the local liquor license commission has decided that a girl must be 21 years old before she may buy intoxicants. The law department held she was competent to imbibe, legally, when 18 years old.

TURKS TAKE BRITISH IN ASIA MINOR

TOWNSHEND YIELDS UP FORTRESS OF KUT-EL-AMARA.

LONG SIEGE TERMINATES

REBELS STILL HOLDING SECTION OF DUBLIN.

General Townshend, commanding the British force besieged by Turks at Kut-el-Amara, on the Tigris in Mesopotamia since last December has surrendered.

A British army for months has been fighting its way up the Tigris to the relief of General Townshend's force, but although it has won success and worked to within less than 20 miles of the distressed garrison, the combination of stubborn Turkish resistance and bad conditions has prevented its further advance.

A recent attempt to send supplies to Kut-el-Amara by a relief ship under cover of darkness failed.

The force under General Townshend's command retreated to that point, 110 miles down the Tigris from Bagdad, after its defeat late last year in a battle fought at Ctesiphon eighteen miles from Bagdad.

A few weeks after it became evident that the army at Kut-el-Amara would be unable to "beat the odds," a relief expedition was sent. This force, however, encountered comparatively little opposition in the early stages of the march by the river but as it drew nearer Kut-el-Amara it was opposed by formidable bodies of Turks massed on both sides of the Tigris below the invested town. Several striking victories for the relief force were announced but their last efforts have been countered by the Turks so successfully that the advance has been stopped. The Turks, taking the offensive pushed back the British and inflicted large losses on them.

Throughout the Mesopotamian campaign the fighting has been heavy and the losses severe. Newspaper dispatches from Dublin report parts of the city in flames with street fighting and looting continuing but with steady progress being made by the military against the rebels. Artillery fire is being directed against burning buildings in some quarters it is reported.

Last night, according to one correspondent the troops reinforced by new arrivals, appeared to be getting the upper hand and the end seemed near. All the rebel positions are declared to be commanded by the regulars.

Official news on the state of affairs in Dublin today is lacking and the situation in disaffected districts outside the city is clouded in uncertainty.

IRELAND TORN BY REBELS.

Fight Desperately in Capital City Against Regular Troops.

DUBLIN, Ireland, Thursday, Apr. 27, via London, April 29.—Fifteen hundred or so armed men of the Sinn Fein had a hold on Ireland's capital today. After four days of fighting their rebel flag still flew from a number of central points. Since Monday some of the chief positions in the city have been in the hands of the rebels. In defending these strongholds against regular troops and Irish Nationalist Volunteers, the rebels are fighting with desperation for their lives, which they know may be forfeited on account of treason.

Regulars now command all the rebel positions, the fall of which is merely a question of time.

The streets of Dublin were deserted today, except for sentries and military guards. Business was at a standstill. Civilians peeped anxiously from behind curtained windows. Field guns were barking, machine guns rattling and rifle fire was patterning, apparently from every quarter at the same time.

When the Associated Press correspondent landed early this morning at the quay near the customs house the pinging of bullets from rifles of snipers in the vicinity was frequent. Augustine Birrell, the secretary for Ireland, had made the passage from England with the newspaper men. As he stepped ashore, he shouted cheerily:

"I wish you luck, gentlemen. I don't know what will happen to you, now that you are here."

Soldiers and rebels fired at each other from street corners, wharves,

One of the New Low Broad Effects

Every family should own their own home. They will find it a pleasure and a source of comfort. Besides, there is no greater incentive to save, than to build and pay for an attractive home of your own planning. The owning of a modern house is one of the high ideals of man and generally lays the foundation for his future success. The longer you put it off the harder it is to get a start in life. Don't wait until it is too late.

House Plan No. 1

Low broad effects are attempted in this type of house—broad low cornices, massed openings and low pitch roof. The same effect is carried out inside, with low ceilings, broad fireplace, short case—ment windows. All finish is plain square materials, arranged to carry out the horizontal divisions of the walls. The plans will repay a glance. The exterior walls, cement plaster; plaster planes of cornices; shingle roof over one-ply roofing. A house of this class will cost from $5,000 to $6,500.

For the convenience of prospective home builders the Times-Democrat will publish this page each Saturday night. The center space will be used for a series of views of modern residences, giving floor plans and descriptions. We are sure you will find something in the series that will just suit your ideas. The firms represented here are all well established, reputable concerns and will gladly furnish any information desired or estimate on any kind of work.

THE G. O. P. PLATFORM

Boss Barnes of New York tells us that there is to be born in the Chicago convention a new candidate, a dark horse who will lead to victory the countless hosts of the enemies of Wilson. At this juncture we do not deem it undignified to rise and inquire on just what platform this miraculous messiah is to run.

Is he to declare the president's attitude toward Germany too stern? If so, he adopts the policy of abrogating those neutral rights to which Germany herself has once subscribed. How then will the patriotic Americans, those who believe in principle and the redemption of pledges and promises and in the sanctity of treaties—how will they vote?

Is he to clamor that the ultimatum to Germany was belated and our firm stand tardy? Shall he adopt the stand that we should have plunged into war without first trying to get as much as possible out of diplomacy? If so, his platform can be construed in no other way than as a demand for war. Where will the pacifists line up?

Is this modern Moses opposed to adequate preparedness against war? Is it safe to expect him to decry increased equipment and a greater standing army? If so, how can he draw the votes of those who understand the conduct of modern warfare and who see the moral of the old parable about the wise virgins who provided themselves with extra oil?

Does he call Mr. Wilson a tame and cowardly executive, afraid to adopt a stronger stand in favor of universal service and conscription? In that contingency, what will those do who know the difference between adequate preparedness and feudal militarism?

Does he consider the president's Mexican policy weak? If so, how can he avoid the instinctive tendency of thinking Americans to classify him with Hearst and those annexationists who have tried for three years to plunge this nation into a disastrous war, merely to protect the vested interests of trouble-makers?

Will he declare the Mexican attitude too strong and the pursuit of Pancho Villa an invasion? Under that flag, how can he secure the support of those who want the massacre of Columbus avenged and the Stars and Stripes respected?

Will he assert that the Underwood tariff is a failure? How then will the prosperous citizens vote who have enjoyed prosperity under this fair and equal standard of assessment?

Can it be that he will demand a stronger fiscal and financial policy? If that is to be his slogan, what improvements will he suggest for the federal reserve act and the currency bill, two of the greatest financial measures ever passed by an American congress?

The Republican redoubler is up against it. Wilson's middle-of-the-road course has kept him from all pitfalls, and there is no issue on which the Republican party can base a campaign. The only issue will be that of who is to sell the stamps and collect the revenues.

GRADUATION DISCOURSES

With the determination of high school girls in this city or that to wear simple gowns of inexpensive material and design we are made cognizant of the approach of graduation season, one which means much to the senior and nothing but a huge joke to the alumnus of more than a few years' standing. It is a season of gifts and congratulations, praise and commendation, all spread on just thick enough to conceal the real significance.

The word "commencement" means just what the derivation implies. The senior is not finishing his high school career—he is attending

NEW NOTES FROM MOVIELAND
By DAISY DEAN

IF YOU HAVE seen "The Fool's Revenge," "A Soldier's Oath" or any one of the numerous pictures of this order you may remember that you could not help admiring Kittens Reichart. She is six and a half years old, "goins on seven," as she will tell you. She comes as near to being an actual moving picture star as any child of her age or experience.

But Kittens has an added distinction of which it must be confessed she is not overproud. She went through an entire year of her life without a real name. Mother and Father Reichart just couldn't think of a name to give their baby and delayed the christening while they debated the subject. Meanwhile both called her Kittens because she played about just as kittens do. Finally her parents decided to keep the nickname they had bestowed on her as her given name, so to church they went and Kittens became little Miss Reichart's honest to goodness name for all time.

Finland is a country suffering from wide-spread misapprehension. The prevalent impression is prone to picture her as a waste of snow, and ice, a land of endless winter. She gets her fair share of cold weather, but the rest of the year is more beautiful by contrast. Nyslott, the little Finnish city in the heart of the lake region, is one of the most quaintly attractive places imaginable—in summer time.

Summer comes with a rush. Nyslott has six months of winter and has to crowd the other three seasons into half a year. About 10 over night it seems, the bite is gone from the air, the sun begins to swing up from the southward, the deciduous trees put out their buds and break into leaf, even the hardy evergreens that have stubbornly defied old winter, seem to take a new interest in existence. It is spring, and then, almost before Nyslott has gotten accustomed to the idea, it is summer.

The ice melts quickly from the long sliding arms of the sea, from the sinuous twisting lakes. Where a mail-steam made regular trips a few weeks before the water rippled to the stroke of oars. These lakes of Finland are as picturesque as the most exacting printer of postcards.

were anxious to make up for his exile southward. The long-repressed joy of living fills the air.

Nyslott herself is as picturesque as the surrounding landscape. Picturesque in the literal sense of the word, as though she had just been cut from a frame. The grim old castle frowns down on the lake on one hand, on the trim little city on the other, just as some mediaeval craftsman would have sketched it.

In summer Nyslott has a chance to make up for lost time. There are weeks when it never grows really dark, when the stars are never seen, when you can read on the street at midnight if you have nothing better to do, when the clear deep waters invite the swimmer, when the fish will bite at anything on a hook, when the woods are rich in birds and berries.

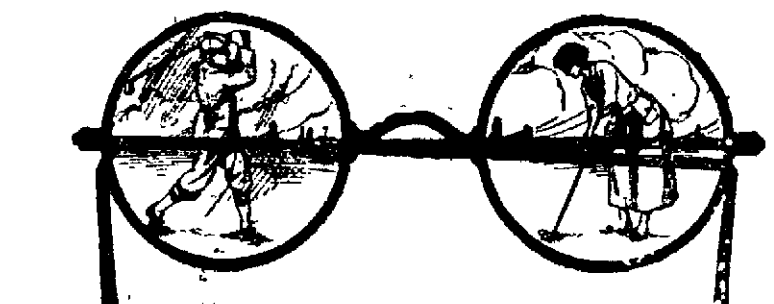

Like most good things, it does not last long. Autumn crowds on the heels of summer, there comes a skim of ice of mornings, the sun flees southward again before the lances of frost. King Winter mounts the throne to reign for another long six months.

NO MORE LONESOMENESS
"Before we had our phone put in," said Mrs. Wilkins, "I used to get so lonesome."
"I used to think that if I didn't talk to Mother, or Sister Julia, or some of the girls, I couldn't stand it."
"So one day I spoke to John about it, and he laughed and said he guessed he could fix that all right."
"I couldn't imagine what he intended to do, but the first thing the next morning the man came to put in the telephone."
"You can imagine how delighted I was."
"I called up Mother the first thing, and had a nice visit with her. Then called up Julia and some of the girls."
"I am never lonesome any more. Whenever I want to talk to anybody, I just call her up. It is like having all my friends with me, all the time. It's sort of like magic, isn't it?"
I was afraid John had been extravagant in getting the phone, but, do you know, we only have to pay five cents a day!"

Syrup Vigor in Capital for Tot's Education.

Educators are awakening to the fact that there is little use in drilling scholars in the three R's unless a fourth R is added—for Right-living. It is evident that the mental development of the child cannot be secured unless it has sufficient physical vigor to perform the acts required by the educative process.

Nature is concerned first of all in maintaining life and demands that the energy of the child be directed primarily to that end. The normal child is endowed with more energy or vigor than is required for nutrition and growth.

This "factor of safety" may be regarded as the margin to be utilized by the school for intellectual development.

If vigor be deficient on account of inadequate nutrition, imperfect breathing due to adenoids, constant combating of germ poisons from infected tonsils or decayed teeth there is less margin left to be utilized in getting "education."

The margin of physical vigor in excess of bodily needs is the capital which the child has to invest in education.

It is the first business of the school to see that this capital is as large as possible.

The school therefore, should give primary attention to the health of the children, not only for the sake of health, but also to the end that education may be more effective.

MILITIA BOYS TAKE TEST.
Non-commissioned officers of Company C, O. N. G., were given their first written test in military maneuvers last night, when about a dozen of the boys seated around tables in the criminal court chamber of the Safety building, and were given the test under the supervision of Captain Clark Crops and Sergeant Strick. If the applicants are successful in passing the test they will gain the right to attend the encampment for non-commissioned officers at Camp Perry this summer.

Mrs. Milton Bloom, of Richie avenue, entertained the members of the E. T. W. club at her home Wednesday afternoon. The hours were spent with sewing after which a delicious lunch was served by the hostess, assisted by her sister, Miss Elma Crider. 'JACK' MOONEY AGE 5 IN TOLEDO POLITICS

Scion of Democratic Family Casts Vote For Whitlock as President.

"Jack" Mooney, nephew of M. J. Mooney the insurance man, and well known here, cast his first vote in Toledo, Tuesday. As proof he offers a certificate from the election officials of his precinct that he recorded his first choice for president as Brand Whitlock.

"Jack" usually goes to and from kindergarten with Miss Genevieve Parker, five years of age, but on primary day she returned alone, stating that the boy had gone to vote. Presently he arrived with a certificate in his hand, stating that he had voted for Whitlock for president.

The officials had fixed up an imposing looking document stating that the lad, "residing six doors from Virginia and two from Parkwood on Bancroft," preferred Brand Whitlock for president. His father, J. J. Mooney, was service director

CLOSING MATINEE OF MUSIC CLUB IS DELIGHTFUL EVENT

"Musical Milestones" Depicts Various Periods With Costumes.

Members of the Local Organization Produce Entire Program.

"Musical Milestones," depicting the various musical periods, in costume, was given yesterday afternoon at the Faure opera house, as the closing matinee recital of the Women's Music club. The lower floor and balcony was packed with fashionably-dressed women. Members of the club furnished the program.

The curtain rolled on an old garden, with a background of palms, the orchestra screened and the performers seated in garden chairs and swings. It was an ideal setting and one of restful beauty.

Miss Margarette Zender, delightfully groomed, with shaggy hair and crook, gave the first number, "Nymphs and Shepherds," by Parcell, representing the early classical period.

The second classical period was illustrated by a string quartette, composed of Miss Gail Watson, Miss Martha Pinn, Dr. E. J. Curtis and Charles L. Curtis. They played "Andante" by Haydn, representing the time from 1733 to 1805; Minuet by Beethoven, 1748 to 1805, and Bourree by Bach, 1685 to 1750. The young women wore dresses caught up with frills in the rear, short sleeves and powdered hair and wigs. The men wore satin breeches, velvet coats and wigs. They attracted much attention and their costumes were especially suggestive of the period of their musical numbers.

Miss Anne Cantwell and Miss Martha Steuber gave the "Unfinished Symphony," by Schubert, 1797 to 1828. Their dresses were short and favored of by those days. Miss Cantwell wore a small apron and red shawl about her shoulders, with red stockings and slippers. Miss Steuber also wore a small shawl about her shoulders and a wee apron and old costume.

The audience broke into a ripple of laughter when Mrs. Forster Robinson, who next appeared upon the program, entered. She sang "Still wie die Nacht" (Calm as the Night) by Bohm (1844). She wore a dress of white, with flowing hoop skirt and a big straw hat, lavishly trimmed. A black lace scarf was about her shoulders. She wore black mitta and a pretty fan, on jeweled chain, was about her neck. She readily carried off the honors.

Miss Esther Lynch favored with Schubert's "Romance," D flat, Op. 24, No. 9, playing in her usual pleasing manner.

Mrs. M. M. Keltner, as the flower girl, scored a decided triumph. Dressed as the Italian maid, with her skirt of a vivid blue, a red bandanna handkerchief about her head and a basket of flowers in her arm, her sweet voice was heard behind the scenes long before her appearance on the stage. Miss Rae Heber, accompanist, was in Italian dress. Mrs. Keltner sang "La Florida" or "The Flower Girl," by E. Reizman.

Miss Helen Wenner represented Blanche, solo, "The Lark" by Glinka-Balakirev (1803-1857). Her hair was hanging down her back and tied with a huge bow at the end, while her costume was especially suited to her dainty figure.

An interesting feature of the program was the group of folk songs given. Mrs. Ann Roberts Davies of Gomer, impersonated the Welsh, singing "Y Beryl Pur." She wore a high hat, a large black apron and the simple costume of the Welsh people.

Miss Lillian Beall, as the Scotch lassie, gave "Coming Through the Rye." This was Miss Beall's first appearance before the Women's Music club and she was given merited applause. In plaid kilt and tam-o-shanter, with plaid hose and slippers. She made an ideal Scotch lassie. She took well her part, her voice being unusually appealing and her stage appearance most delightful. Mrs. Forster Robinson, who appeared earlier on the program, is Miss Beall's teacher. Her accompanist yesterday was Miss Bonnie Linn.

Mrs. Melvin Light in peasant costume, with white Dutch cap, sang "La Colomba" (the Dove) as a representative of Tunesian.

Mrs. R. O. Woods and Ernest C. Baird appeared as representative of the Germans, singing "Du, du Liegst mir im Herzen." Mrs. Woods was dressed as a German peasant girl, with short dress and blue stockings, and a clever little apron. Her hair hung in braids down her back. Mr. Baird as a German boy, was in velvet breeches, white stockings and a neat little Dutch coat and cap and butterfly tie. Their number was given generous applause.

Miss Helen Wenner represented the American, singing "My Old Kentucky Home." Gower daintily and prettily, and with voice like a bird, she was merited praise. Singers from the rear of the stage joined in the final chorus.

The climax of the afternoon was reached in the two numbers, "A Summer Shower" and "Night" by Paul Bliss, given by the Music club chorus. Their singing was a perfect delight. Miss Millie Sonntag, probably one of the best woman directors of choral societies in the middle west, wielded the baton.

In the chorus were Mrs. Forster Robinson, Mrs. Charles Black, Mrs. R. O. Woods, Mrs. M. M. Keltner, Mrs. A. L. White, Mrs. J. F. Kriest of Delphos, Mrs. Ira Longworth, Mrs. John W. Roby, Mrs. George L. Wall, Miss Helen Wenner, Miss Bertha Falk, Mrs. Melvin Light, Miss Minnie Sonntag and Miss Anna Wilhelm. Miss Esther Lynch provided the accompaniment.

Throughout the afternoon Miss Bertha Falk provided accompaniment for most of the numbers, not otherwise stated here. Miss Edna Peat was accompanist for Mrs. Robinson.

The Week In Society

MARIEN NAGEL

New marshy pools on the road's edge,
Or creeks that slip 'twixt banks of sedge,
With marigolds be set afloat;
And not a corner south or north,
But there a brier-rose breaks forth,
And bees go drowning down the air.

The bramble now begins to blow,
The elder-bush puts on its snow,
And birds be sweet till fall of dew;
And when my love and I go out,
So thick the grass grows all about—
In truth, it scarce will let us through.

—Lizette Woodworth Reese; A Branch of May.

More than ordinarily significance has been attached to the week just past, certain interests in modern social and educational endeavor. It was Shakespearean week and in New York City, Boston and others of the large cities the activities of both amateur and professional adherents of the theatre reached a splendid climax.

It proved conclusively that the supposedly dangerous encroachment of the movies on legitimate theatricals is without foundation and that there is no decadence of the drama and dramatic expression as represented by the spoken word.

There seems to be more than ever this year a prodigious interest in those more cultured entertainments by readers of authority whose word puts them in a class with the best actors and actresses of the times.

In this class is Mrs. Helen Marti Schuster-Martin, of Cincinnati, who comes to Lima on Wednesday evening, May 10th, for the Young Ladies' Circle of the First Baptist church.

Mrs. Martin will present Parks' "Disraeli," three-act drama, a thrilling pen picture of the eminent politician-philosopher who undertook and subdued such remarkable handicaps.

Mrs. Schuster-Martin can be said without fear of contradiction to be Lima's favorite dramatic reader; she is well remembered from former visits, and on this occasion when she presents "Disraeli" one of the big successes of the past season, she will have doubtless the record audience in size and importance of the season.

Women who heard the delightful program, "Musical Milestones" at the Faurot opera house yesterday, as the closing matinee recital of the Women's Music Club, were charmed with the attraction. This is only one of like pleasant afternoons Mrs. W. L. Mackenzie, the new president, has provided for next year, the first of which will be a garden party at the fine, old Mackenzie home on West Market street.

Every woman who knows what the club means will want to be a member. The membership cards are being rapidly signed and all who have not done so, should give their names to Mrs. R. O. Woods, secretary, 119 South Metcalf street, Mrs. Mackenzie or one of the members. Aside from the musical features and interest, the social side of the club is pleasing to every member.

Mrs. Carey May entertained the members of the Needlecraft at her home this afternoon. The afternoon was spent with all sorts of needlework, music and games. Delicious refreshments were served by the hostess, assisted by Miss Helen Bowman. The club will meet again in two weeks.

Dr. and Mrs. Arthur M. Griffin entertained the members of the choir at their home on South Cole street. The evening was passed with music and interesting discussions. Refreshments were served at the close of the evening by the hostess.

Members of the Philathea class of the Central Church of Christ were entertained yesterday afternoon at the home of Mrs. A. D. Carnes. Spring flowers were used as effective decoration throughout the house. Mrs. Elmer Collier was the only guest of the meeting. A short business session preceded the social hour which was enjoyed by all those present. Delicious refreshments were served at the conclusion of the afternoon by the hostess, assisted by Mrs. Wilbur Robnett. The class will meet again in a month.

Mrs. Garland Sanders entertained the members of the Ohio Electric Needlework club at her home yesterday afternoon. The club colors, red and white, were carried out in the decorations with tulips. Sewing and contests occupied the hours of the meeting. Prizes of the contests were won by Mrs. Zada Broshes, Mrs. Ollie Day and Mrs. Kookon. Guests at the meeting other than the club members, were Mrs. Lee, Mrs. Fritz and Mrs. Emelick. Mrs. Day and Mrs. Broshes assisted the hostess in serving a two-course lunch after which the club adjourned to meet again in two weeks with Mrs. Pogue of 832 North Main street.

Five thousand French women have met together to consider the best means of uprooting intemperance in France. Then the drink facilities are doomed, let Parliament be slow as it will. Voteless and lacking in political power, it is true, but great things have been done without either. Madame Legros, a woman in the haberdashery retail trade, was the first to break the bars of the Bastille, when by her ceaseless importunities she forced Louis XVI. to grant the release of Latude. Michel says that once reason and liberty came to be mere theories and reach the heart of a people, the artificial disappears. Then Bastilles fall.

Mrs. Charles E. Thomas of 1002 West Spring street, will entertain the members of the Ladies' Aid socety of the First Baptist church at her home, Friday afternoon. The meeting will be social.

The Woman's Missionary society of the First United Brethren church, will meet at the home of Mrs. D. B. Stewart of 1174 Brice avenue, Wednesday afternoon at 2 o'clock. The following program will be given.

Solo—Mrs. O. E. Knepp.
Devotions—Mrs. Thos. Montague.
Hymns—Mrs. John Siferd.
Reading—Mrs. Edward Rader.
Selection—Missionary Quartet.
Business Session.
Lesson—Mrs. O. E. Knepp.

More than one hundred guests attended the open meeting of the Queen Esther circle at the Trinity M. E. church last evening. A short playlet giving the advancement of the work being done by the circle was given the first part of the evening. Miss Marjorie Warfield, Miss Mildred Jones, Miss Florence Hunter, Miss Blanche Peth, Miss Helen King, Miss Thelma Sanders took part in the play. Solos were given by Miss Catherine Gramm, Miss Donna Shappell, Miss Geraldine Kah and a trio by Geraldine Kah, Margaret Thompson and Helen Conner. Miss Ruth Rinebolt and Miss Doris Harper had the lesson in charge. Tea was served in a Japanese tea room by young girls in costume. Those serving were Treva Bussert, Ruth Wells, Abigail Sullivan, Lillian Williams, Margaret Simpson and Wilma Hoover.

Mrs. J. F. Krieff, Mrs. J. N. Badler and Mrs. C. C. Kitts were in Lima Friday afternoon, attending the final recital given by the Music club of that city at the Faurot opera house. The program was termed "Musical Milestones," and was given in costume—Delphos Herald.

Miss Emma Birkmeier of Delphos was the guest of relatives in Lima yesterday.

Miss Elizabeth Newson, who is attending the Ohio Wesleyan University is spending the week-end with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. George L. Newson of State street.

Mrs. Calvin Miller of Delphos attended the Music club recital yesterday.

Mrs. Harry N. Nagel of West North street, is spending several weeks visiting with relatives in Mentone, Ind.

Leon Miller is the guest of Mr. and Mrs. George L. Newson of State street.

Miss Marie Stolly of North Pierce street entertained Friday evening a number of her friends at her home. A delightful surprise was given to the guests at the close of the evening when Miss Stolly announced her coming marriage to John Runyan of Delphos.

John Carnes of West Market street entertained last evening with a dinner in honor of a few of his friends. Among the guests were Allan Barty, Max Thompson and Edward H. Stolzenbach.

Miss Mildred Jones entertained last night in honor of Miss Gladys Patterson, who has announced her coming marriage to Ross Pepple. The entertainment was in the form of a miscellaneous shower, and the bride-elect received many pretty things. Guests were the Misses Alene Hoover, Florence Priest, Margaret Orchard, Jeanette Fleming, Helen Polser, Frieda Flemming, Margaret Macalvane, and Ella Churchill. The pleasant evening was concluded with delicious refreshments served by the hostess, assisted by her mother and Miss Florence Priest.

A Bostonian says that Shakespeare was the "supreme reporter." Not because he could depict so much that was only imaginary, although that power would have insured him a place on the staff of many newspapers published today, but because he had insight and descriptive power in dealing with nature and men as they are visible to a good reporter. Shakespeare might have qualified for journalism of the best sort, old or new. Poets, dramatists and wise commentators surely will not begrudge the effort of the journalist to establish some affinities with the Avon bard at this hour. He was big enough for all.

Mrs. L. Wheeler, of East Kibby street, was hostess yesterday afternoon of the Franklin Stutcher club. Hyacinths in all colors were used as decorations. In the contest Mrs. Alligre, Mrs. Nipp and Mrs. Heffner won the prizes. Guests other than the club members were: Mrs. I. R. Wheeler and Mrs. William Heffner and Miss Frances Allen. The hostess was assisted in serving a two course lunch by Mrs. Ira Wheeler and Mrs. Allen. Mrs. Alligre will entertain the club in two weeks.

Marrying for Money

In Which All Ends Happily Despite Sorrows of the Recent Past.

"I COULD HARDLY wait to have you come and see how cozy we are," said Marian Townsend as she ushered Nell and Olive into the living room. "This room seemed very small at first because the one at the other house was exceptionally large."

"Yes, and after that I am to be a business woman. I am to help the boys in the store. It will save the expense of a clerk and we can the sooner get out of debt." The girl's face was bright and eager. "I shall feel that I am helping in earnest, and Tupper does not need me here, of course."

"That will be fine," chorused the friends.

"I do not suppose you hear from Mrs. Townsend," remarked Nell.

"Of course we want to lose track of her at the earliest possible moment, but the lawyer happened to mention yesterday that she was living in Chicago with Adelaide Blakely the same Adelaide that visited here."

"Probably she will not find life so dull there as she did at Fairport," Marian's voice had not lost its scornful tone when she spoke of Ortrude.

"I do not believe the woman corresponds with a single person here. It is strange that in over a year she did not make a single intimate friend," said Nell.

"To have friends one must show one's self friendly, and she was too bent on doing what pleased herself to consider anyone else," answered Olive.

"As I sit here and listen to Tupper moving about the kitchen I half expect to hear 'Daddy come up the walk. I can almost persuade myself that all the heartbreak and trouble were a bad dream from which I had happily wakened and all is as it used to be.' The girl stealthily wiped her eyes."

where they have been spending the winter months.

Last Thursday the Shakespeare Study club had their last regular meeting of the year. All felt that they left the club this year in extremely good condition, not only socially but financially. Much regret was expressed about the resignation of Mrs. Edward Foster, past president but all are looking forward to the administration of Mrs. George Quail who was asked to fill the vacancy. The club feels that Mrs. Quail can carry on the work in its present high standard with more than ease. Mrs. Julia Simpson has been asked to fill the vice president's place. Both women have shown their executive ability in other clubs, and there is no doubt as to their capacity to have a very successful year. Mrs. W. C. Bradley will be secretary next year and Mrs. Glen Wallace, treasurer.

Mrs. L. E. Justus, of South Pierce street, entertained the members of the Sutorium club at her home this afternoon. The program for the meeting was:

HOW many girls have whispered to moving-picture actresses: "Do you ever fall in love with your leading man? And is the love real, reel or imaginary?"

Red lips turn purple, faces become ghastly green, blond hair looks for all the world like seaweed and blue eyes change to the hues of a watermelon. Just imagine, girls, when the hero puts his arm around you and says, "I love you—I adore you—will you be my wife?" you must look up into his lavender eyes and see his discolored lips coming close.

Oh, my! Would you give us Moron hearts, you sentimental young girls, and have us fall in love with every romantic turn in every story of romance that we play in? For there are mighty few scenarios nowadays that do not end up happily ever after, with the scenario writer's last scene diagrammed, "Fade out slowly on a love scene between the hero and heroine."

Don't be disheartened, but most of the handsome leading men are very happily married to dear little wives, and acting is to them what bonds and stocks are to the business man—a part of the routine of everyday life.

Of course, a hero and heroine may look very beautiful to you when you gaze upon them on the screen, but how your ideals would change if you is going on, and if you could only gaze upon their painted faces which look startlingly unreal in the glare of the bright blue calcium lights.

Of course, a hero and heroine may look very beautiful to you when you gaze upon them on the screen, but how your ideals would change if you remains thrilled by the kisses of their leading man?"

"Oh, fiddlers!" often says the leading man in a most unromantic way when the scene is over. "Let's see if the director won't try it again. We were both awkward as giraffes, and I know if I were given another chance I could do it much better."

"It's your fault," says the saucy leading woman. "You had too much powder on your face—I nearly sneezed when it came to the lines; when you told me how unhappy you would be if I refused to marry you. It was you who were the giraffe—not I!"

Can you imagine anything less sentimental than that, Miss Romantic Young Schoolgirl? And leading men, like leading women, are not always so picturesque or so courageous off the screen as they are on. If you met the ideal of your dreams after seeing him in a beautiful play of three acts, you would find that he does not talk so cleverly as he does on—he does not speak in the language of Shakespeare, but of Broadway and Forty-second street.

Alas, for the little rainbow vanities! We feminists are never happy unless miserable!

Answers to Correspondents

Betty W. S.—Yes, your understanding of my instructions on scenario writing are very adequate. I might add that it is of help to note which companies produce plays you see, and thus form an idea of the type of photoplays produced and preferred by each company.

Heloise B.—I do not know the film you refer to nor can I place the actor you describe. Why not write to the company producing the film?

E. R. P.—Denman Thompson did not appear in "The Old Homestead" as he is dead. I was not in your city on the date you mention—in fact, I have never been there, but hope that some day I will be so fortunate.

B. T. R.—Henry Kolker played the leading part in "The Warning" and the scenes you refer to were secured by double photography.

G. P.—No photoplay of which I know has been built around Patrick Henry. If you have made such a detailed study of his life, you should be the better judge as to its dramatic qualities.

John W.—Certainly a boy or man secures his start in the movies according to the methods I have outlined for girls. You will doubtless have to start as extra man and will secure your first chance according to your type and the demand for it.

The Ladies' Aid and Missionary society of Calvary Reformed church meets at the home of Mrs. J. I. Klingler of 327 North Baxter street, on Wednesday afternoon.

Employees of the Lima Natural Gas company entertained a number of their friends last evening with a dance at the Laux Academy. About 75 couples were present to trip the light fantastic in the ball room, which was decorated with green and white ribbons, spring flowers and palms. The grand march was led by Prof. and Mrs. Laux. Out of town guests were: Miss Nora Hollingsworth of St. Marys, the Misses Mary and Helen Lange of Celina, and Miss Ruth Costerman of Celina. Music was furnished by a five-piece orchestra.

Announcement was made Thursday of the coming marriage of Miss Ada Whelpley and Harry F. Mr. F. F. formerly of Lima, is now employed in Toledo, and is now preparing a home for his bride in that city. Miss Whelpley lives with her sister, Mrs. Frank Cheney of West Kibby street.

Thursday and Friday evenings the Junior class of the High school will present a play. It is expected to be unusually good as the class has talent for acting and has been given excellent training by the teachers of the school.

Y. M. C. A. ANXIOUS TO HAVE ALL FRIENDS AT DINNER

The committee on arrangements for the Y. M. C. A. dinner conference next Tuesday tried to send invitations to all who might be interested. They realize that in going over many hundreds of names some of those they most desire to have present will be missed. If any one would like to be present have not received invitations, they are requested to notify Secretary Eberhart, and the committee will see that places are reserved for them. It is of the utmost importance that those who have received invitations and who expect to be present should mail their acceptance without delay.

SOCIALIST MERGER PROPOSED.
NEW YORK, April 29.—A proposal to merge with the socialist party is one of the important questions before the national convention of the socialist labor party here today. When the socialist party recently nominated Allan L. Benson for the presidency by referendum, it also decided to authorize its executive committee to name a committee to confer with the socialist labor party's representatives regarding a union. It is expected that today's convention will appoint a committee for such a conference.

KILLED BY OWN AUTO.
NEWARK, O., April 28.—Charles Hillier, 55 years old, railway postal clerk from Pittsburgh and Indianapolis, died this morning of a paralysis caused by an injury received last summer when he was run over by his own automobile. Mr. Hillier cranked his machine without disengaging clutch. The machine ran over him. He never fully recovered from injuries to his spine.

WILSON SIGNS PENSION BILL.
WASHINGTON, April 29.—President Wilson has signed a bill granting ten dollars a month additional pension to soldiers and sailors holding congressional medals of honor for heroism in action.

To Build Up—After Grippe, Colds—Bad Blood

Take a blood cleanser and alternative that starts the liver and stomach into vigorous action, called Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery because of one of its principal ingredients—the Golden Seal plant. It assists the body to manufacture rich red blood which feeds the heart—nerves—brain and organs of the body. The organs work smoothly like machinery running in oil. You feel clean, strong and vigorous instead of tired, weak and faint. Start to take it to-day and before another day has passed, the impurities of the blood will begin to leave your body through the eliminative organs, and in a few days you will know that the bad blood is passing out, and new, rich, pure blood is filling your veins and arteries.

HUNDREDS WILL TESTIFY RIGHT HERE IN OHIO.

Springfield, Ohio.—"I used 'Golden Medical Discovery' as a tonic and building-up medicine. I was run-down so that I weighed 15 lbs. less than usual. I was tired-out and suffering. I learned of 'Golden Medical Discovery' through a booklet left at the door, and used three bottles of 'Discovery.' I began to build up and get stronger and I now have my usual weight and strength back again."—Mrs. MAUD HARRIS, 17 No. Shaffer St.

For all diseases peculiar to women, Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription is a powerful restorative. During the last 40 years it has benefited the lives of tens of thousands of women the pain, misery and distress caused by irregularities and disorders of a female character.

CITY FEDERATION IS TO NOTE MAY DAY

Home Economics Committee Gives Program to Aid Vocational School.

The beautiful custom of observing May day in Lima will fall to the Home Economics committee of the City Federation of clubs, and will be held on Monday afternoon from one o'clock in the afternoon until 10 p. m. at Memorial hall. Not only club women, but every woman and girl in the city is invited to attend. The tickets are 10 cents for admission.

All who are interested in Lima having vocational schools where women and girls may learn sewing and cooking under good teachers, summer mornings and evening, are urged to attend the entertainment.

A century of dress is one feature, so all who can are invited to wear some old-time clothing and make the day a success. Club and non-club women and girls are included in the invitation.

There will be twenty booths arranged around the hall. The most May-like one being the garden booth, where one can buy lovely plants ready for transplanting. They will be sold at regular retail price.

Nothing will be over ten cents in any booth except some of the kitchen utensils ranging from 15 to 60 cents. The program begins at 9 o'clock.

At 2:30, Mrs. Marie Webster will speak for a half hour on quilts and their story. At 3 o'clock, Mrs. Foster Robinson will give an old-time song, in costume. At 3:45, children from Lowell first grade will give a kinder polka. At 4 p. m. the May pole dance will be given by girls of Junior Music club. The violin quartette, Misses Anna Bradley, Josephine Sherwood, Dorothy Hunter and Margaret Neuman, will play. At 5 p. m. Barcarolle by Offenbach. At 5:30, the court minstrel will be danced by six couples in full court costume. From 6 to 7 a buffet lunch can be bought in the west room, where the Domestic Science club will dispense hospitality and good home cooking.

The string quartette will play at 7 o'clock the Scarf Dance by Chamade. Then Miss Wyrle will sing two May day songs at 7:10 p. m. At 7:15 the minstrel, and at 7:30 two songs of today by Miss Ruth Wiesen. The Junior Music club will give the May pole dance at 7:45 and at 8 o'clock the quilt story.

Mrs. Robinson will repeat her song at 9:30 and at 9 the string quartette will play waltzes from Romeo and Juliet.

Premiums will be awarded to the girl who has done the best sewing in department of high school. This will be choice of either one pair of gloves or hatlety at Carter & Carroll's. Premium for millinery from same high school department will be given by M. U. Baskinger.

Premiums for best cake will be given first by F. E. Harman, a decorated service plate; second, one-fourth barrel of Lima; third, one-eighth barrel of Lima.

There are many more interesting events and sights arranged to delight all who attend.

MOOSE TAKE NOTICE.

All members of Moose Lodge will meet next Sunday afternoon at 1:30 at Moose Home, West North street, and march to Memorial hall. Members are urgently requested to be in attendance.

WALTHER LEAGUE TO MEET.

Representatives from churches in many Ohio cities and others in the middle west, will come to Lima tomorrow to attend the convention of the Walther league at the Immanuel Evangelical Lutheran church, Jackson and Kibby streets. The opening services will be held at 9:30 o'clock. Visitors and delegates will be extended dinner at noon. A business session will be held at the Chamber of Commerce at 2 o'clock and a concert will be given in Memorial hall at 7 o'clock in the evening.

WASHINGTON BORN FEB. 11.

The date of Washington's birthday was, according to the calendar at the time of his birth, February 11. This became February 22 when the Gregorian calendar was adopted in 1762. The first place to use the new date in celebrating the event is said to have been Newport, R. I. As late as 1788, Washington himself apparently used the old style in referring to his birthday. His diary for that year has this entry: "Feb. 11, went up to Alexandria to the celebration of my birthday. Many maneuvers were performed by uniform corps, and an elegant ball and supper at night."

QUEER SUPERSTITIONS.

The Japanese have many curious superstitions about animals, the chief among which is their belief in the supernatural power of foxes. There are numerous shrines, dedicated to foxes in Japan. The badger is another animal feared by the superstitious Japanese mind. It is believed to have power to annoy people, and to be able to turn into a priest, at will. The crying of weasels and the baying of dogs are regarded as evil omens, and such insignificant happenings send a shudder over the believers. In Japan a light-colored mouse in the house is a sign of happiness. If a spider falls from the ceiling in the morning it brings pleasure, but if at night, it is thought to be unlucky. To see a centiped at night means happiness in Japan.

FAUBOT—WM. FAVERSHAM IN "THE HAWK"

There is, in the American theatre, no player more sure of his laurels than Mr. William Faversham. An actor of brilliant talents, scholarly attainments and wide experience, he brings to the interpretation of his characters an artistic insight commanding signal attention. Therefore the announcement that Mr. Faversham will be the attraction at the theatre for today and Sunday, opera house for one performance only on Thursday night, May 4, in his great success "The Hawk," is an event well worthy of being marked with a star for special consideration. "The Hawk" affords Mr. Faversham an opportunity to once more show the facility with which he can interpret and make convincing a character of strong yet conflicting temperament. The character is one which in itself, and at the hands of a less brilliant player, would probably prove repellent, yet Faversham wins and holds the sympathy of the audience with it. His performance is virile, brilliant and well balanced. It is said by critics to be the best modern role he has created, and in it is found that touch of romance which is of the east.

"The Hawk" is a love story of modern society life, from the pen of Francis de Croisset, translated by Marie Zana Taylor, adapted and staged by Mr. Faversham. It came to production in French at the Nouvel Ambigu, Paris, and scored a success which kept it there for a year. On its presentation in New York a like engagement was scored.

"The Hawk" is a Hungarian of good birth, Dassetta by name, who has very limited resources. Deeply in love with his wife he gambles to satisfy her extravagant tastes and his wife helps him in his cheating. A young diplomat falls in love with the wife and she responds to his love. He catches her cheating, she confesses it has been a regular practice with them and promises to reform. She tries to induce her husband to join her in stopping the card games and is so insistent his suspicions are aroused. He at last forces from her a confession of her love for the other man. Follows a scene of thrilling power in which the husband goes away and leaves the diplomat and his wife together. The wife, after an interval, decides to have a divorce and marry the diplomat. She must first have the husband's consent.

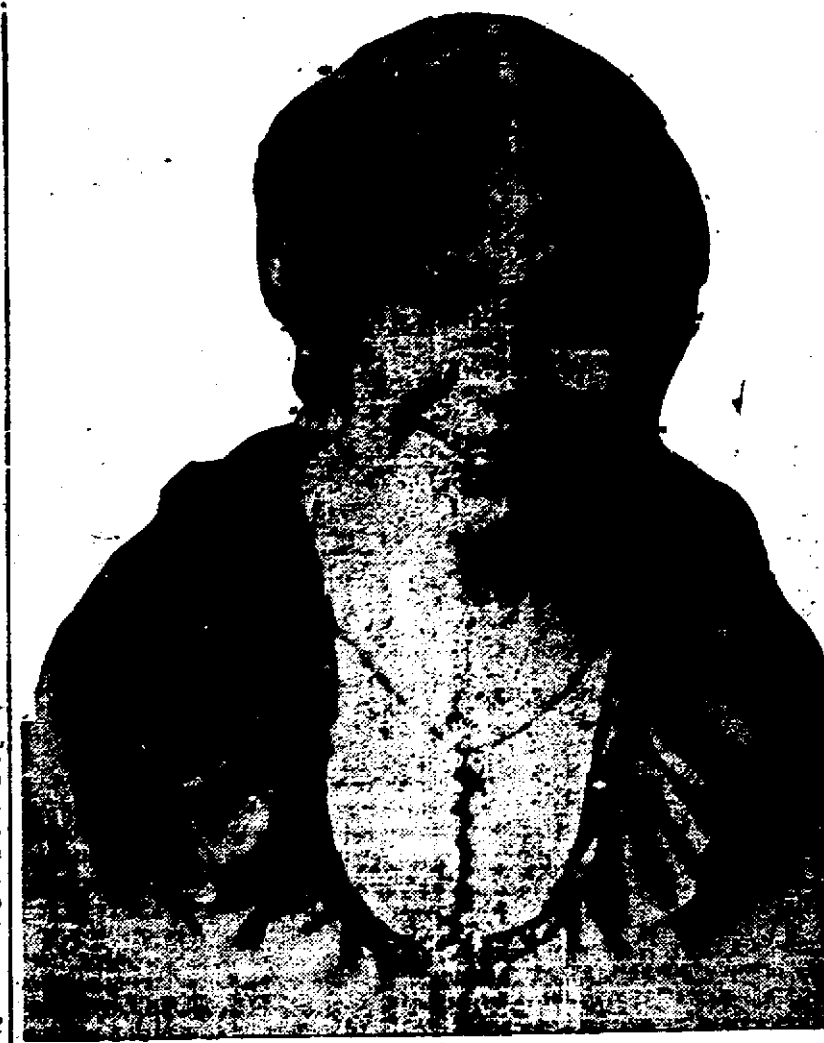

They are confronted. With the incentive gone he has given up gambling but fallen a victim to morphine in seeking forgetfulness of his love for his wife. In the scene which follows it is brought home to the wife that she was responsible for the wreck which had come to their happiness. She is also made to realize the great love her husband has for her. At the last she finds she really loves him after all, and as the curtain falls they are about to go out and find a new life in a new way in a new land.

Mr. Faversham will bring with him for his engagement here the same excellent company which appeared with him through the recent Chicago run. The cast includes Arleen Hackett, Albert Roscoe, Grace Henderson, A. S. Byron, Elsie Oldham, Edwin Cushman, Martha Mayo, Herbert Belmore and others. Joseph Barker has designed and built the three excellent settings in which the play is framed and it is said they are worthy of that regard established by Mr. Faversham's prior productions.

As "The Hawk" has now been played in a majority of the large cities of the country Mr. Faversham will retire it after this season and make a new production. Thus the coming engagement will afford local playgoers their only opportunity to see him in one of his most notable parts.

STAR THEATRE

The large and loyal clientele of the Star theatre will find much satisfaction in the announcements of that theatre for today and Sunday. For today the list of new, first-run photoplays will include "Through Flames to Love," a two-part Imp drama in which Harry Benham and Edna Hunter are featured. "Their Anniversary," a Rex comedy with Ben Wilson and Dorothy Deavenport in the leading roles, and the Animated Weekly, with its budget of important world events as caught by the camera.

The Star's program for Sunday is a most alluring one. It will have beautiful Cleo Madison in a Rex drama, "Eleanor's Catch." Juan de la Cruz and Stella Rasetto will appear in a two-part Gold Seal drama, "The Purple Mase," and a Rex comedy, "Her Hero Maid," draws on the expert laugh-making ability of Billie Rhodes and Lee Moran.

AT THE FAUBOT

Paramount and Metro pictures continue to delight large audiences at the Faubot. There will be one interruption into the film entertainment this week, that of Thursday night, when William Faversham will close the dramatic season in his successful play, "The Hawk."

For today the Faubot has secured a return engagement of "Wild Olive," the splendid picture in which Myrtle Stedman so delighted the patrons of the Faubot when it was first shown at that theatre. Miss Stedman will have the support of Forest Stanley and other capable players of the Morisco forces. The added feature is Paramount Pictures, the clever film novelty that not only amuses but conveys a little information and instruction to the spectator.

The atmosphere of warm, flower-scented nights; of tinkling music; of deeds of daring to win a lady's glance; scenes of intense hate and strong passion are all blended in a fascination that entrances in "The Heart of Paula," the Pallas picture to be shown on the Paramount program at the Faubot on Sunday and Monday. This story of the burning love of a Spanish maid for a handsome American star beautiful Lenore Ulrich, who will be most pleasantly remembered for her delectable acting in "Kilmeny." Miss

WILLIAM FAVERSHAM TELLS OF HIS EARLY EXPERIENCES

An Interesting Record of the Distinguished Actor's First Years on the Stage

[These here are a few advance pages from the early part of a book of memories, not yet completed for publication. They constitute a chapter of reminiscences that go back to the beginning of an actor who has long occupied a high place in the American theatre.]

Copyright by William Faversham.

WHEN I was a youngster my one idea was that I could be an actor. It seemed to me that I could make money and give expression to my feelings that way. Of course, I was full of romance and trying to ignore all there was in me to the great public.

I had heard and read a great deal about our English actors, Charlotte Clegg, who starred in America with Pader. She was, indeed, a great actress and all London respected her and her art. The foremost managers sought her advice when it came to their final dress rehearsals.

I went and rang her doorbell one day and told her my story. I gave her an assumed name. Instead of turning me away, when she heard I had no money she took me in and asked me what I was doing and what I wanted to do. I told her I had left my home and was working in a shop so as to earn money to live on.

I was really working in a foundry in Marylebone Lane, where I had to go to work at five o'clock in the morning and work until nine and then go back at twelve and work until five. I did not like to tell her this. It was a foundry where they made the big flat irons that go on the backs of upright pianos. The steel, or iron, or whatever it was, was melted, poured into a shape, and cut off by a gigantic knife that came down automatically, which was big enough to cut up an elephant if he got anywhere near it. It frightened me almost to death at first—it seemed like a great, living monster; and I used to wonder if any of the other boys might accidentally push me and I should fall under it what would happen. We used to have to go naked and work in a little park of swimming trunks because it was so hot. We boys used to hold these flames between enormous pincers, and then carry them away and dip them in water. It was very hard work for which I received the sum of seven and six pence a week.

I finally confessed to Miss Le Clerq where I was working, and she persuaded me to leave the place and help me now and then with a meal and let me run errands in return. I received from her instruction as an actor and went to the daily classes at her dramatic school. After I had been with her about two or three weeks, she told me that I needed no instruction—that all I needed was to play "parts."

Miss Le Clerq was one of the most wonderful old ladies I have ever known. I even knew her mother who was a very, very old lady and was also very good to me. During this period I met her sister Miss Rose Le Clerq, whose son, Fuller Mellett, had then been making his trips to America with Henry Irving, and was considered a very magnificent and handsome young leading man. Miss Le Clerq described him as wearing American clothes with heavily padded shoulders made of a cloth patterned with enormous checks. He was, as we say today, quite a "cut," and we all envied him.

My instructor gave me my first appearance in public one afternoon and I played the balcony scene and the Friar's cell scene from "Romeo and Juliet." I sang the balcony part in "The Swiss Cottage." After that I played Peter Shylock in "The Merchant of Venice." My debut was considered a great success. I felt that on it now and I can't help laughing at my recollections that day.

place Mrs. Southend, Gravesend, Croxson, Brighton, Bournemouth, Warwick and the Town Hall in Stratford-on-Avon. On our first night I had to appear as Max in "The Swiss Cottage," which was a baritone part. Then we played "A Naval Engagement," which was a part in two acts, and ended up with "Hester's Mystery," in which I played Joel, an old man of seventy.

The next night I would play Claude Melmoth, the next night Romeo, the next night Hamlet, Gato in "The Merchant of Venice" and Sir Peter Teasdale in "The School for Scandal" and Captain Absolute in "The Rivals." We didn't get any salary, but we got our living paid.

During this tour we were playing in the suburbs of Birmingham and living in a boarding house in the city. When we got home one night the manager of a company that was playing "The Silver King" at the principal theatre—I think it is called the Prince's or the Princess's—asked Miss Le Clerq if she had any young man who could go on and play the part of Corbett in "The Silver King" the following day, as the man they had was taken very ill. I was chosen. I learned the part overnight and played it the next night. Our little company played the rest of the week without me, and I had the honor of playing with one Mr. Brooks, who was very famous as the Silver King in England.

At the end of this tour Miss Le Clerq took me to Henry Irving, and I was engaged to play in his coming Shakespearean production of "Twelfth Night." The part assigned me was that of the page to Duke Orsino. This got on my nerves, as I was concealed enough to think I ought to be playing a bigger part. I walked out of the theatre one day into a cheap pub off the Strand and there I met a man named Horace Barry, (a brother of Hans Barry who played in America). He asked me to go down to Ramsgate and join his stock company to play all his leading juvenile parts, and said he would give me three pounds a week. So, without sending any regrets to the stage manager of the Irving company or to Miss Le Clerq, I packed my bag and journeyed with him to Ramsgate.

I discovered the theatre we were to play, which had the wonderful name of the St. James' Theatre, was a most extraordinary building. The stage was a shop. It was a very wide shop, about thirty feet in breadth, I should think, and the window that faced on the sidewalk of the street was the back wall of the stage. So that the people could not look in and see us they used to cover the window with theatrical posters, sticking them on the glass. Of course it was very amusing for the people who were passing along the street because they could see our shadows, gesticulating and moving about on these posters, and of course they could hear our voices, for in those days we were very young and virile and used to shout our heads off.

The audience sat out in what would be the back yard; this was covered with canvas and had wooden forms for seats. The audience had to walk up a passageway by the side of the house to get in.

I opened with this company in a place that they had written themselves from a novel by Miss Braddon, called "The Traff of the Serpent." We called it "Gift for Gold." I afterwards played Corcoran in "Motha," the part that Kyrie Bellew played, and which made him famous in London.

Then the management came to the conclusion that I could play the leading parts better than the leading man, so they put him in another position and gave me all the leading parts. I alternated the parts of Dick Swiveller and Quilp with Mr. Barry in "The Old Curiosity Shop." They used to make me play Hamlet every Saturday night, and they didn't want me to have to sing the part of Max in "The Swiss Cottage." They had an idea it was a in those days. They always used to play a farce either before or after the tragedy. We did such plays as "Tric-Trac," "Nicholas Nickleby," "Oliver Twist," "The Stoops to Conquer," "School for Scandal," "Romeo and Juliet," "The Streets of London" and many of the old standard plays and classics.

Finally Mr. Barry conceived the idea of dramatising "Under Two Flags," Goida's novel. On a Saturday afternoon the company sat down in one of the dressing rooms, which were under the stage in the cellar. Mr. Barry took the novel and as he dictated we each wrote down our parts. They went upstairs, rehearsed it all night and Sunday and played it the following Monday night.

I must tell you that during all this time I had received hardly any money—now and then a few shillings. I had to leave the hotel I was living in; then I was put out of my boarding house, and I slept underneath the bathing machines on the sands—when the bobby was not about. The sea air was good. It was a nice time of the year, and I didn't mind.

I remember once waking up early in the morning with the sound of two some of his parts, but I preferred to stay in America.

We produced "Under Two Flags." I played Lord Bertie Cecil. I was the original. It was a great success and we ran it for about three weeks. Then we heard we were going to be arrested for dramatising one of Goida's novels, which were copyrighted, and the management got us all out of town. We went on to Brighton. The second night I was in Brighton I received a visit from a brother-in-law of mine, who was staying there with his wife, my sister, and my mother and some other relatives. I was discovered at last and they insisted that I go home with them. Glad of the prospect of a decent place to sleep, a few square meals and a shilling or two in my pocket, I decided to do it and went home.

During this time I met some Americans who had known a brother of mine when he had taken an interest in a ranch in Colorado, years before, at a place called Nunda. I confided in this gentleman, told him my story and how distasteful my life was; that I was practically living on charity, as my mother had nothing. He offered me a position to go to America with good-sized handbag somewhere at about eleven o'clock at night.

In the afternoon of that day I was asked to drive the pony down to the old Woking Village with a cartload of apples that had been sold to the green grocer there. I had managed to pack a flat leather trunk stuffed with brass nails—it was a very old-fashioned thing—with the things I wanted to take with me. I sneaked it out of the house and hid it beneath the apples in the cart. I went to Woking Station with it and expressed it on to Waterloo. It was a very old-fashioned thing, with a very old-fashioned lock. I considered it a very nice piece of work—getting it away without any one even noticing it.

On this night I managed to get several lifts on wagons that were travelling into London—most of them market garden wagons going to Covent Garden. However, I did reach London by somewhere about eight or eight-thirty o'clock, and then I jumped on the top of a tram car and finished the last part of my journey.

I arrived in London during the tremendous riots known as the Big Workmen's Riots, when 250,000 men marched on London to demand work and food. I was in the middle of their fight in Trafalgar Square, when the soldiers with bayonets and swords drawn, charged the crowd and drove them out of the city.

The Life Guards impressed me very strongly, and as I looked at them, I thought I would change my mind and not go to America—that I would go to the enlisting Sergeant, take the "Queen's Shilling," and join the Life Guards as a Tommy. I accordingly applied and was taken to the enlisting station. I had to go the next morning for the examination with a number of other young men. I noticed I was passed in everything in the way of wind and limb, heart, lungs, etc., with a jolly smile and I put on the back from the enlisting Sergeant and the surgeon who examined us. And then, with two other young fellows, I was asked to take two paces backward.

We did so. The other men were called out to right wheel and marched away. We stood there, turned left wheel, and stood over in the corner. I wondered why this was, because all the fellows who had the right wheel looked splendid, and I thought to either they, or we were going to be rejected. Then I was informed that I didn't quite reach the height required, for in those days you had to be six feet and growing—that means 18 or under—and had only reached 5 feet 11½. They asked me to go into the Dragoons. My pride was very much hurt that I could not get into the Life Guards, so I said I would "see." I went away and never returned.

I had borrowed and saved and collected, one way and another, through selling different things that I had on the quiet, and thus accumulated enough money to buy a ticket to Liverpool. And there I got on the Italy of the National Line with my American friend's New York address in my pocket. The ship I was to have traveled on, the Queen, was burned at the dock so they substituted the Italy in its place. I went on her and Dickens' description of his trip across the ocean was proven to what we went through on that boat. We wandered over the Atlantic for somewhere about five weeks. The ship was disabled; there was illness and deaths; most of the food gave out, also the propeller so we went under sail all the rest of the way to New York and as I look at it now it was altogether a most awful voyage. But I didn't realize it then and didn't care.

"The Italy," I remember rightly, was a ship of about 4000 tons, not more. The smoking room was at the stern, almost over the screw; it held only about twelve or fourteen people. The entrance to this room was amidships facing forward. To reach it we had to walk along the deck forty or fifty feet, which sometimes, during this voyage, was a very dangerous undertaking. We were very often washed to the door by the waves rushing down the deck and sometimes slid down when the deck was covered with ice. Finally we made a rope passage from the deck of the main compartment to the door of the smoking room. I ran down the rope on one occasion begged the captain to allow us to go to the smoking room, as we wanted to smoke and get together for a little fun and an impromptu concert. We had been shut up below in the main saloon so long we felt that we could bear it no longer. It was a very bad night, but the captain took pity on us and decided to let us go.

Things went splendidly for about an hour. Then in the midst of one of our jolly choruses there was a sudden smash of water across the deck and the smoking room was no more. It was completely smashed. The broken partition dashed us against the iron back, and some of us were buried beneath it. Most of us were very severely hurt, in one way or another. I remember that I held on to an iron leg, or some sort of iron post bolted to the deck, that supported a small table. Out of this male I managed to pull a certain Mr. G.—of Philadelphia, who was very badly hurt and very badly frightened. We had been swept aft and his two legs had gone through the iron railing that ran around the deck of the ship, and they were completely hanging over the sea. With the broken partitions, tables, etc., and several men being piled on top of his head and chest, it must have seemed to him that he was going into the wild ocean. And I firmly believe that if he had not had a fat stomach, as well as several men lying on top of him, he really would have gone through the railings and overboard. This Mr. G.—and I afterward became very good friends, and I met him for many years whenever I went to Philadelphia to play.

In our raids on the galley for food, (for we used to steal food whenever we were hungry), I managed to get choice pieces of food for a man, Mr. F.—. He was a man old enough to be my father. I used to entertain the crew and the few passengers we had. I think there were nineteen, by reciting and singing songs, for there were days and days when the doors were battered down and we could not go upstairs.

Mr. F.—took a great fancy to me, and told me I ought to be an actor. I confided to him that I was. He said he was the business manager for one Helen Hastings, who was being backed by one Lord L.—who had brought to this country Miss Violet Cameron, but was now bringing out Helen Hastings, a famous bar-maid from the Criterion. He was going to star her in a play called "Pen and Ink" at the Union Square Theatre. This Mr. F.—very kindly recommended me for the leading juvenile part and I finally got it, upon our arrival.

We arrived in New York, and I went to rehearsal. There I met W. J. Ferguson, who was very friendly and very charming to me. Like all imaginative and emotional young men, I told him my story and he was very kind to me, though, at the last moment, he tried to persuade me to leave the company. He told me the play was going to be a failure. I said I must have food and here was $30 a week and I couldn't chuck it up. He gave up his part and left.

Miss Helen Hastings opened at the Union Square Theatre and on the opening night Miss Caroline Hill was in a box. She evidently was impressed with my work, for she went to Daniel Frohman and told him to see me. He sent for me and gave me an engagement, which was to start the following Nov. 30, and he gave me a contract to this effect. Miss Hastings was a failure, and so was our play, and we closed up at the end of two weeks.

So I had been the end of January and the 30th of November to live through. I had a fine somewhere, but I couldn't get any more money. I was actually gone. After paying what few things I had left, with the exception of my dog, who still stood by me, I decided to get some work at anything. The boarding house keeper would give me no more credit and finally shut me out.

First I tried to get a job as a car driver on the Madison Avenue cars and to drive about the car stables at 80th Street and Madison Avenue every day, but finally they turned me away. I afterward found out that the man who took applicants to the head office to get positions as car drivers was in the habit of receiving a tip from these applicants—he must have been one of the original grafters. It always seemed to me such an unalloyed system, that this man should scheme to get a tip from a class of men, like myself, who were absolutely poverty-stricken and, as they say nowadays, "down and out." Otherwise we should not have been there begging for work.

Then the great God of Nature came to my rescue and the frightful blizzard happened. There was such a cry for snow shovellers that I managed to make a good deal of money clearing away snow from the front of houses on 22nd, 21st and 20th Streets, between 6th and 6th Avenues. They were all residences in those days. This did me quite well and gave me, and my dog, Sam, a very good living. But as the weather cleared up and Spring began to appear and my money again died down, I had to leave the place I was living in, and not knowing what to do, I used to wander in the Park, and I found a very nice place up there where one could sleep under shelter.

There was a very dignified, fat Park-keeper, who took great exception to my remaining there when he discovered that I remained all night. Then I told him my story and he was very good about it. I used to help him in the morning to clean out two very primitive dressing rooms—one for ladies and one for gentlemen.

Just at this time there was a mineral spring opened up in the Park, from which the city decided the people could go and drink the newly discovered mineral water. The keeper used to stand there and watch the cups and see that there was nothing thrown into the water. He was very tactful and very nice, and would allow me to help him pass the cups. Sometimes I used to receive five and sometimes ten cents as a tip. I also remember at this time that I did a lot of window cleaning on 72nd Street, which helped me to get along.

Then Spring came in earnest and I wandered up toward the Harlem River. Where the Speedway is now, was all rocks and trees—quite wonderful woods. I remember snakes used to be there, for I have seen my dog chase them many times, and I have hit at them with my stick.

They were building High Bridge. I applied to a man there for work. The foreman of the plumbing department—the man who was superintending laying the water pipes—was an Englishman. He gave me work at $1.50 a day. I worked on High Bridge all through the summer right up until the end of October and lived with the foreman and his wife in Tremont.

One Sunday afternoon in October, I had taken an airing and was lying on the grass in a field alongside the driveway, which I believe is called Jerome Avenue, watching the carriages and buggies and trotting horses carrying people on their Sunday afternoon airings. An English dog-cart with a very nice, high-stepping cob came along driven by a friend of mine who had known my people in England and who knew of my escapades there. I found out afterward that he had been searching for me all over New York. I noticed that he pulled up his horses sharply and began looking at me. I got up to walk away. He threw the reins into the hands of the lady who was sitting next to him, jumped out of the carriage and called to me. I turned around, seeing there was no escape. We shook hands and had a long talk. He took me down and introduced me to the lady.

We went to the nearest hotel, one of those old-fashioned road houses, sat down and had some refreshments, and I laughingly told them my story. They enjoyed it immensely, but my friend insisted that I come home with him and get my hands and myself generally in condition for my work in the theatre and thought I had a great chance. I promised to see him in the course of the next week or two. He used to drive up nearly every other day after that in the evening. And finally I packed up and left Mr. Pilgram and his wife, with much regret and was installed with my friends at 150 Fifth Avenue. Then according to my contract I began my engagement at the Lyceum Theatre with Mr. Daniel Frohman.

Mr. WILLIAM FAVERSHAM

boys running down the sand to dash into the sea. One of them stumbled over by the bathing machine under which I was sleeping. I heard a voice ring out—a voice that I seemed to know so well, and loved so much, a voice that I thought perhaps was the greatest I had ever heard on the stage.

"Widely and slow; he stumbles that runs fast."

As I looked from under the edge of the bathing machine I saw it was William Terris, and those were his two sons running into the water. I spoke to him; he recognized me, and gave me a good "doing" for not coming back to the Lyceum Theatre. I told him my story, and he laughed and said that everything would come out all right. I didn't see him again for many years, until after I had come to America and made a name for myself. We then became quite good friends, and when he left the Lyceum I was offered him as his private secretary. Why he should have done it I don't know as I had no education and had no more chance of becoming a good private secretary than I had of becoming a good bank president. However, he told me if I reached America he would take me on.

This was all done unbeknown to my family. My relations went down to a country home which they had bought some years before from my mother at Cambridge in Surrey, close to my own home there at the present time. There they were going to spend the winter and Christmas, because London got so foggy, and I was taken down with them.

All the time this feeling of living on charity got on my nerves, and with the first snow of winter I packed my bag, stole out in the middle of the night and walked to London. It was a matter of about thirty-one miles. I ran out of the house with a rather good-sized handbag somewhere at about eleven o'clock at night.

In the afternoon of that day I was asked to drive the pony down to the old Woking Village with a cartload of apples that had been sold to the green grocer there. I had managed to pack a flat leather trunk stuffed with brass nails—it was a very old-fashioned thing—with the things I wanted to take with me. I sneaked it out of the house and hid it beneath the apples in the cart. I went to Woking Station with it and expressed it on to Waterloo. It was a very old-fashioned thing, with a very old-fashioned lock. I considered it a very nice piece of work—getting it away without any one even noticing it.

On this night I managed to get several lifts on wagons that were travelling into London—most of them market garden wagons going to Covent Garden. However, I did reach London by somewhere about eight or eight-thirty o'clock, and then I jumped on the top of a tram car and finished the last part of my journey.

I arrived in London during the tremendous riots known as the Big Workmen's Riots, when 250,000 men marched on London to demand work and food. I was in the middle of their fight in Trafalgar Square, when the soldiers with bayonets and swords drawn, charged the crowd and drove them out of the city.

The Life Guards impressed me very strongly, and as I looked at them, I thought I would change my mind and not go to America—that I would go to the enlisting Sergeant, take the "Queen's Shilling," and join the Life Guards as a Tommy. I accordingly applied and was taken to the enlisting station. I had to go the next morning for the examination with a number of other young men. I noticed I was passed in everything in the way of wind and limb, heart, lungs, etc., with a jolly smile and I put on the back from the enlisting Sergeant and the surgeon who examined us. And then, with two other young fellows, I was asked to take two paces backward.

We did so. The other men were called out to right wheel and marched away. We stood there, turned left wheel, and stood over in the corner. I wondered why this was, because all the fellows who had the right wheel looked splendid, and I thought to either they, or we were going to be rejected. Then I was informed that I didn't quite reach the height required, for in those days you had to be six feet and growing—that means 18 or under—and had only reached 5 feet 11½. They asked me to go into the Dragoons. My pride was very much hurt that I could not get into the Life Guards, so I said I would "see." I went away and never returned.

I had borrowed and saved and collected, one way and another, through selling different things that I had on the quiet, and thus accumulated enough money to buy a ticket to Liverpool. And there I got on the Italy of the National Line with my American friend's New York address in my pocket. The ship I was to have traveled on, the Queen, was burned at the dock so they substituted the Italy in its place. I went on her and Dickens' description of his trip across the ocean was proven to what we went through on that boat. We wandered over the Atlantic for somewhere about five weeks. The ship was disabled; there was illness and deaths; most of the food gave out, also the propeller so we went under sail all the rest of the way to New York and as I look at it now it was altogether a most awful voyage. But I didn't realize it then and didn't care.

"The Italy," I remember rightly, was a ship of about 4000 tons, not more. The smoking room was at the stern, almost over the screw; it held only about twelve or fourteen people. The entrance to this room was amidships facing forward. To reach it we had to walk along the deck forty or fifty feet, which sometimes, during this voyage, was a very dangerous undertaking. We were very often washed to the door by the waves rushing down the deck and sometimes slid down when the deck was covered with ice. Finally we made a rope passage from the deck of the main compartment to the door of the smoking room. I ran down the rope on one occasion begged the captain to allow us to go to the smoking room, as we wanted to smoke and get together for a little fun and an impromptu concert. We had been shut up below in the main saloon so long we felt that we could bear it no longer. It was a very bad night, but the captain took pity on us and decided to let us go.

Ulrich will have the support of Forrest Stanley, Howard Davies, Herbert Standing, Velma Lefler and other favorite players of the Pallas company and the picture has been pronounced a masterpiece of settings and photography. The added comedy feature will be Bray-Gilbert Silhouettes with the title, "Inbad the Sailor Gets Into Deep Water."

Victor Moore, the inimitable comedian who captured the audiences at the Panrot with his delightful portrayal of Chimmie Fadden, will appear at that theatre on Tuesday and Wednesday in "The Race," an automobile comedy drama in which the ubiquitous comedian has the support of Anita King, the Paramount Girl. Miss King is the nervy young lady who made a dash across the continent last fall from Los Angeles to New York all alone. The photoplay in which she and Mr. Moore appear is founded on several incidents of the trip, which included Lima in the itinerary. New Burton Holmes Travelpictures, "Billbid," the "Sing-Sing" of the Philippines, is also on the program.

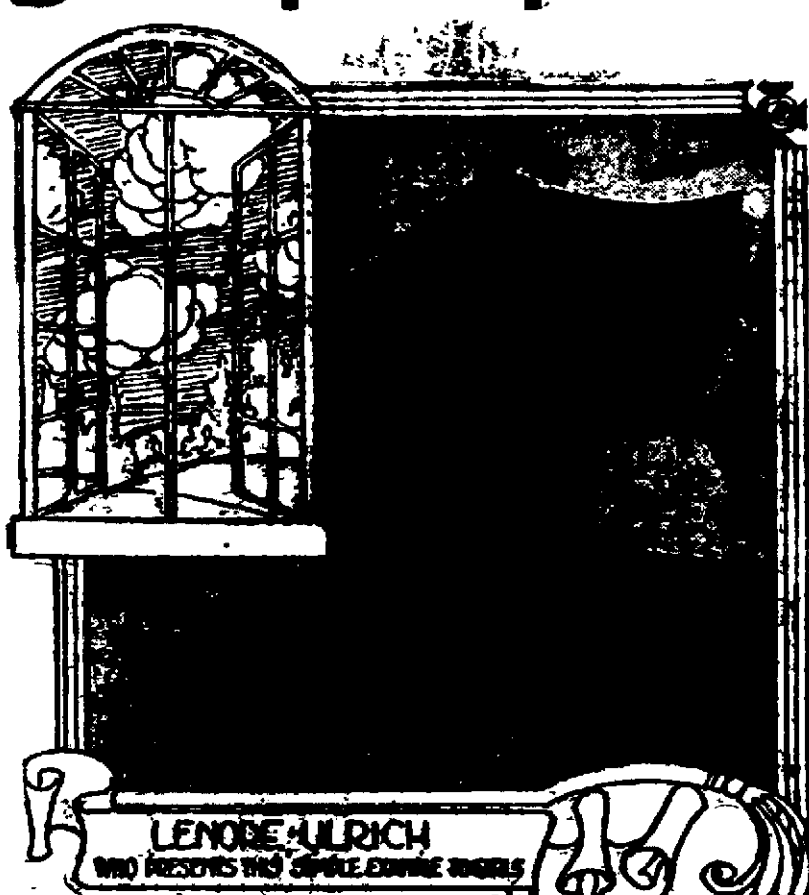

The Metro feature for this week is limited to Friday on account of the appearance of Mr. Faversham on Thursday. It is entitled "The Blindness of Love" and has the distinction of having three distinguished stars in the cast. These are Julius Steger, Grace Valentine and George Leguere. Mr. Steger is a new-comer to the Metro program, but has an enviable reputation as a stage star. As a baritone he has won distinction in grand and comic opera, as a vaudeville headliner he has long been prominent and now the screen claims him as one of its most valued artists. Miss Valentine and Mr. Leguere are prime favorites with Faurot audiences and have been seen in a number of superb Metro productions. This program will also contain "The Swooners," a clever comedy skit in which Mr. and Mrs. Sidney Drew will appear.

For next Saturday the Faurot will have a return of the beautiful and talented actress, Charlotte Walker, who will again be seen in that sterling drama, "Kindling," in which she scored such a success at the Faurot last fall. Paramount Pictographs will complete the program.

AT THE ORPHEUM.

One of the most interesting theatrical events of the present season is the production of "The Rosary" at the Orpheum theatre the first half of this week. The management is sparing no expense to make the engagement of Chet Keyes and his players, one long to be remembered to Lima theatregoers, and in offering this well known play at popular prices the management believes they are giving exceptional value. The story of this great play which has been so phenomenally

LENORE ULRICH
WHO RESIDES THIS SPLENDID ROOM

As a multifunctional woman Lenore serves a good complexion more than Ulrich has ever sought any beauty cream regularly each night, said the fair play which the popular actress was Lenore recently while resting between successful is one of interest and tells how Bruce Wilton has amassed a fortune which he lavishes on his wife, Vera. Their household is a happy one but into it creeps a note of menace. No one hears it at first, save Father Kelly, a priest, the former tutor of Bruce. Quietly he goes to work with his sharpened mental sense to find the person who is causing the adverse influence in the household. Almost on the verge of discovering the cause, calamity descends upon the Wilton House. Bruce's fortune is swept away, and in such a manner that he believes his wife was the cause of his ruin. Her husband and wife are separated, the home is destroyed and yet the cause of all this disaster is unknown. But Father Kelly, with a faith that moves mountains, goes on quietly, serenely, confidently, with but one purpose in view, the happiness of those he loves. He solves the mystery and lets the white light of truth into the minds that have been darkened by evil. More than this, he finds the one who has caused all the misery and restores the home.

It is from the pen of Ed Rose, the author of more real successes than any playwright in the world. The capable cast of the Chet Keyes company will give the play a proper presentation and no detail will be overlooked to make the scenic production perfect. Miss Helen Keyes is cast in the difficult role of the sister and Miss Dot Keyes is seen to advantage as Kathleen O'Connor, a character for which she is admirably suited. Mr. Hack is seen as the husband, Mr. Kikoff as the priest and Chet Keyes furnishes a great deal of comedy as Skeeters. There will be the usual matinee on Tuesday. For the last half of the week, Harold Bell Wright's success, "The Shepherd of the Hills" will be offered.

THE ACHES OF HOUSE CLEANING
The pain and soreness caused by bruises, over-exertion and straining during house cleaning time are soothed away by Sloan's Liniment. No need to suffer this agony. Just apply Sloan's Liniment to the sore spots, rub only a little. In a short time the pain leaves, you rest comfortably and enjoy a refreshing sleep. One grateful user writes: "Sloan's Liniment is worth its weight in gold." Keep a bottle on hand, use it against all Soreness, Neuralgia and Bruises. Kills pain. 25c at your Druggist.

GERMANY FORBIDS IMPORT OF FILMS

Order Causes Excitement Among Manufacturers; Prices Advance.

NEW YORK, April 29.—Under a general order lately issued by the German government the importation of cinematograph films is forbidden and, in spite of the war, has not been much interfered with, the action of the government has caused excitement among the manufacturers and dealers. During the war films have been imported from neutral countries especially from Denmark.

The motion picture theatres are largely dependent upon films from neutral countries for their attractions, and it is thought the prohibition will affect their business. It is claimed, however, by the German and Austrian film manufacturers that they are in position satisfactorily to support the market, and that the industry will be benefited by the prohibition order.

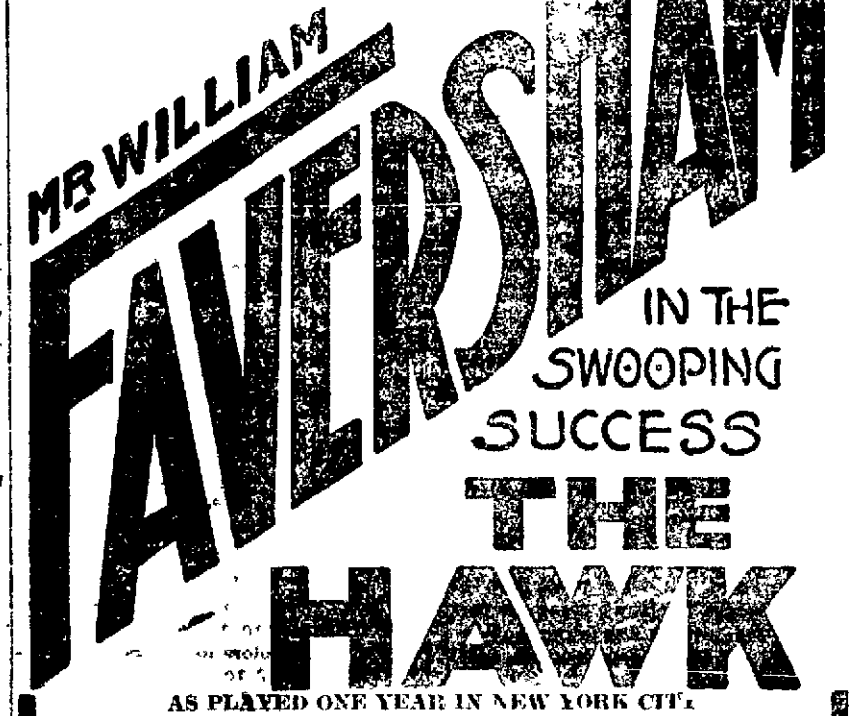

Theda Bara in "Cold and the Women," premier Sunday.

The prices for single films have materially risen since the beginning of the war and it is expected that there will be a further advance. A meter (32 1/2 feet) of raw film in Germany costs 47 pfennigs (11 1/2 cents at normal exchange), in neutral countries 32 pfennigs (7 1/2 cents). Theatre owners hope the order may be modified.

Cleveland Wins Pitchers' Battle From White Sox

CLEVELAND, O., April 29.—Dumont 3; Nabors 3; Gallia 1. Um-Cleveland won 2 to 1 from Chicago pires, Connolly and Owens. Time, yesterday, scoring the deciding run 2:05.

The contest was a pitchers' battle between Morton and Williams. Each allowed five hits. Neither gave a pass but Morton hit a batsman, who scored.

Not a hit was made off Williams until there were two out in the fifth. Then Wambagans doubled and scored on Weaver's high throw of O'Neill's grounder. Chicago tied the count in the sixth, when Williams was hit and scored on singles by Murphy and McMullin.

Howard led off for Cleveland with a single in the tenth, raced to third on Wambagans' sacrifice bunt and scored when Fournier threw wide to third. Score:

Pittsburgh won from Cincinnati 5 to 1, here yesterday. Harmon holding the visitors to six hits while the local team accumulated 11. Three singles and a pass gave the Pirates two runs in the first inning and two bases on balls and two hits resulted in two more in the third. Barney's single after Baile had made a hit and stole second and third, gave the winners another run in the fourth. Right-fielder Hinchman made a double play unassisted when he caught Groh's liner and then ran to first before Chase could get back. Score:

At the close of the games played by the teams of the Grammar School league yesterday afternoon, Garfield continued to lead the other teams in the standing. One of the best contests of the day was between Franklin and Lincoln. The former club won by a score of 10 to 9. Other results were: Garfield 17, Irving 7; Franklin 10, Lincoln 9; Whittier 21, Horace Mann 11, and McKinley 18, Washington 1.

WATCH CHILD'S COUGH
Colds, running of nose, continued irritation of the mucous membrane, if neglected may mean Catarrh later. Don't take the chances—do something for your child! Children will not take every medicine, but they will take Dr. King's New Discovery and without bribing or teasing. Its a sweet pleasant Tar Syrup and so effective. Just lavative enough to eliminate the waste poisons. Always prepared, no mixing or fussing. Just ask your druggist for Dr. King's New Discovery. It will safeguard your child against serious ailments resulting from colds.

Boys' and Girls' Sanctum.
Haven't you some little-used room or attic in your house which could be cleared out and turned over to the boys and girls for a study, den, sitting room, workshop or whatever they may choose to call it? Nothing will give them greater pleasure. Unused pieces of furniture, secret treasures and best beloved books, arranged there ready to be discovered, will call forth much joy. A tea table and chaffing dish, with permission to use them, will turn an ordinary mother into an angel.—Harper's Bazar.

Best School of All.

It cannot be but the author of the "Greatest Show on Earth" was right. The world likes to be humbugged, else why all this elaboration of educational systems and theories, educational forms and creeds this multiplication of modern methods and "didactic material"? These are indeed, but things that change and fluctuate, and are on the way to being superseded. Meanwhile the older and larger school room of life never closes its doors, makes no bid for patronage, retains its old teachers, changes its methods not at all, and continues to turn out the best pupils—Laura Spencer Porter, in the Atlantic.

JEWISH REFUGEES IN SEATTLE, COME FROM EUROPE VIA SIBERIA

Russians Ship Young Men Out of Warsaw Before Its Fall.

Hebrews of Northwest Aid Their Brethren to Begin New Life.

SEATTLE, Wash., April 28.—Since July 15 last, 250 Jewish young men and a dozen Jewish women and children, refugees from Russian Poland and the other portions of western Russia, have arrived in Seattle after journeying through Siberia by rail-road and crossing the Pacific on steamers, mostly Japanese freighters. A few have come directly from Vladivostok, but most of them took steamer in Yokohama and Kobe. Many of the young men are graduates of the Gymnasium, which ranks with the American state university. All are well educated and belonged to the better classes in their native land. Some were wealthy.

When it became apparent to the Russians that they could not hold Warsaw, they shipped out by rail machinery and supplies that would have been of benefit to the Germans, and they sent away the young Poles, Jews and Russians whom they feared the Germans might impress as soldiers. These young men received from the Russian commanders slips of paper entitling them to travel eastward on the Russian railways without charge. The Russian and Polish young men stopped their travel when they reached districts which were not threatened with German invasion, but many Jewish youths continued to travel eastward. They rode free when they could, but often they were obliged to pay the trainmen.

The stories the immigrants tell of their adventures in crossing European Russia and Siberia are highly interesting. Those who were well provided with money arrived in Vladivostok first, made their way to Japan by freight or passenger steamers and, in time, arrived in Seattle. Here those who had the required sum of money entered without hindrance, but those who were without funds were ordered deported. The detained immigrants made their plight known to public spirited Jews in Seattle, who assisted the young men to appeal to Washington against the order of deportation. Then, when the department of labor said the men would be admitted if bonds were furnished, guaranteeing that they would not become public charges, these Seattle Jews provided the bonds, and they are still signing bonds.

When it was seen that the influx of Young Jews probably would not end while the war lasted, the Seattle Jews appealed to the Hebrew Sheltering Aid Society of America, which has headquarters in New York. This society assumed part of the burden of caring for the refugees. It provided funds, arranged to handle the cases of the moneyless immigrants at Washington, and assisted in the organization of a branch of the society in Seattle, with Leo S. Schwabacher as president.

The Seattle branch looks after the refugees from the hour they arrive until they are self-supporting. It has leased the former residence of United States Senator Squires here and equipped it as a home for the immigrants. Those who come with pockets full of Russian roubles need only to have their bills exchanged for American money and to be assisted to learn the language and communicate with friends and relatives in the United States, if they have any. The men without money are instructed in the English language and in American citizenship. Most of the immigrants do common labor at first. Some have become merchants in a small way. Others have been able to get work at their own professions, and a few have done so well that they have sent to Russia for relatives.

These young men are now arriving in Seattle at the rate of 100 a month. One hundred and fifty, it is said, are now in Japan seeking passage to the United States. Abraham Spring, an attorney who is directing the work of the Seattle Aid society, in speaking of the immigrants, said: "This immigration is the most remarkable and most valuable that has ever come to America. These immigrants are the first European to come to our shores by way of Asia. They are in perfect health, highly educated and intend to become American citizens. This society wishes the immigrants not to gather in one quarter of the city, and we located our new home a long way from the Jewish settlement that has lately grown up here."

GOOD ADVICE.

A Lima Citizen Gives Information of Priceless Value.

When you suffer from backache, Headaches, dizziness, nervousness, Feel weak, languid, depressed, Have annoying urinary disorders; Do you know what to do? Some Lima people do. Read the statement that follows. It's from a Lima citizen. Testimony that can be investigated.

J. M. Hamilton, 413 South Central avenue, Lima, says: "My back was so sore and lame that I couldn't sleep well. I had to live in one position at night in order to get any rest. The kidney secretions were highly colored and irregular in passage. I was treated by physicians and tried various medicines that were recommended to me, but got no relief until I used Doan's Kidney Pills. Two boxes improved my health and I have had no kidney trouble since."

Price 50c at all dealers. Don't simply ask for a kidney remedy—get Doan's Kidney Pills—the same that Mr. Hamilton had. Foster-McBurn Co., Props., Buffalo, N. Y.

IF BACKACHE OR KIDNEYS TROUBLE

Eat Less Meat Also Take Glass of Salts Before Eating Breakfast.

Uric acid in meat excites the kidneys, they become overworked; get sluggish, ache, and feel like lumps of lead. The urine becomes cloudy; the bladder is irritated, and you may be obliged to seek relief two or three times during the night. When the kidneys clog you must help them flush off the body's urinous waste or you'll be a real sick person shortly. At first you feel a dull misery in the kidney region, you suffer from backache, sick headache, dizziness, stomach gets sour, tongue coated and you feel rheumatic twinges when the weather is bad.

Eat less meat, drink lots of water; also get from any pharmacist four ounces of Jad Salts; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys will then act fine. This famous salt is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to clean clogged kidneys and stimulate them to normal activity, also to neutralize the acids in urine, so it no longer is a source of irritation, thus ending bladder weakness.

Jad Salts is inexpensive, cannot injure; makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink which everyone should take now and then to keep the kidneys clean and active. Druggists here say they sell lots of Jad Salts to folks who believe in overcoming kidney trouble while it is only trouble.
